Non-ride earnings	$157.00

Expenses

Lyft platform fees	$570.60
Service fees	$314.90
Third-party fees	$44.90
Tolls	$43.85
Express Pay fees	$12.50

Online miles

The total miles you drove while online, including miles when you weren't picking up or dropping off a passenger.

Ride payments

The total amount passengers paid for the rides you gave.

Non-ride earnings

The total amount you earned outside of the rides you gave (like bonuses or referrals).

Lyft platform fees

The total Lyft platform fees passengers paid for the rides you gave. We use platform fees to help maintain the Lyft business.

Service fees

The total service fees passengers paid for the rides you gave. Service fees are added to every ride to support some of Lyft's operational costs, like insurance and background checks.

Third-party fees

The total third-party fees charged to passengers on your behalf for the rides you gave. Third-party fees include items such as airport fees and local taxes.

Tolls

The total reimbursements you got for tolls you paid out of pocket.

Tax tips in partnership with

Tax Tip

Items in the Expenses section of page 1 are tax deductible, but there's more you should know as a self-employed (Schedule C) filer this tax season!

Mileage Tip

You may be able to deduct more than just the 2960.6 Online Miles you logged last year! Offline driver mode miles may also be deductible, if they're for business purposes.

*You have a choice to use the Standard Mileage Deduction to estimate vehicle expenses or the Actual Expenses Method (see Common Vehicle Expenses).

Common Operating Expenses

Keep in mind that personal use is not deductible—for example, if you use your cell phone half for business and half for personal use, you may deduct 50% of the total.

- Wireless plans
- Phone & accessories
- Health insurance
- Passenger treats
- Parking & tolls
- Cleaning supplies
- Memberships (i.e. AAA roadside)
- Subscriptions (i.e. Spotify)

Common Vehicle Expenses

It's possible that deducting actual vehicle expenses (instead of mileage) will get you your maximum refund. Check your receipts and see if you've got the following tax deductions.

- Gas
- Depreciation
- Repairs
- Maintenance
- Lease payments
- Tires
- Car washes
- Oil changes
- Vehicle registration fees & licenses
- Car insurance
- Interest on car payments

Every deduction found. Every dollar you deserve.
